HEAIDS student dialogues on sexual and gender-based violence

HEAIDS student dialogues on sexual and gender-based violence are an initiative of the Department of Higher Education and Training. The initiative is aimed at championing the department's new plans designed to address the high incidences of rape and gender-based violence at universities and TVET colleges.

The initiative forms part of the department's newly introduced strategies that seek to strengthen and deepen HIV/AIDS prevention and support and other initiatives to deal with risks to the students' health within these institutions. These risks include alcohol and drug abuse, which have been found to exacerbate violence against female students. This in turn exposes them to sexual transmitted infections such as HIV/AIDS and syphilis.

All students are therefore urged to familiarise themselves with this initiative by reading HEAIDS booklets and flyers found at the offices of the Student Support Services (SSS).
